Preservation in Allentown is a bumpy road

By Christopher N. Brown

Historic preservation in Allentown has had its ups and downs over the last few years and the immediate future will continue to be a bumpy road. The Allentown Association works to foster historic preservation within the district through education, outreach and aggressive advocacy.

A vacant house at 318 Hudson St., deteriorating for years, was auctioned off by the city last October for nonpayment of taxes. A neighborhood resident who was attended the auction with intent to purchase, but was outbid by Beeville West, a Batavia-based real-estate investment company which bid $20,000 for the derelict house. A careful review of Beeville West's real estate holdings disclosed that the company had serious unresolved housing violations in properties it owned in some Buffalo neighborhoods near Allentown.

This closing on 318 Hudson was delayed by the city until those violations were corrected. The Allentown Association will continue to vigilantly monitor the condition of property as Beeville West takes ownership to ensure that its most significant violations are corrected and any exterior changes are in compliance with city Preservation Board requirements. It is hoped that this monitoring process will make certain that the house is preserved for years to come.

One of the largest accomplishments in historic preservation will be the re-creation of the Theodore Roosevelt Inaugural Site (Wilcox Mansion) carriage house on its original Delaware Avenue foundation along with improvements to the main house. Not only will the re-creation of the carriage house closely match the look of the original carriage house on its foundation, but this will make the Wilcox Mansion accessible to thousands more people by making it fully handicapped accessible, quite a feat for a historic structure that dates from the 1830s.

The $2.2-million reconstruction will open the mansion to many more people than the 15,000 who now visit the house annually.

Other good news includes the continuance of the conversion of the old National Casket Company building at 430 Virginia St. at Park St. into 10 rental units, to be called Al-lertown Lofts. The Planning Board has approved new plans for the Kissling Interests' $2-million project, originally targeted for completion a year ago.

While these large projects are happening, homeowners continue to renovate individual homes. Significant privately-owned residential repair and improvements can be observed on lower Park St., Virginia St. and Wadsworth St.

Historic preservation continues to be a prime concern in Allentown. Education and outreach will be major initiatives in 2008.

Although the community is comforted by these improvements, historic preservation has been and will continue to be an ongoing concern within the district.

In January, two buildings were lost: the Falcon Building at 7 Wadsworth St., near Allen St., and a long-vacant house at 359 Hudson Street. The vacant lot at 7 Wadsworth will likely be publicly auctioned by the city in October, but in the meantime, the Allentown Association is working with the city to erect barriers on the lot for public safety and beautification. The lot at 359 Hudson will be purchased by a Days Park resident and beautified. Thanks to a genuine grassroots effort, the Allentown Association has won the support of Ellicott District Councilman Brian C. Davis NOT to sell 390 Hudson St. to Friends of the Night People, 394 Hudson St., which sought the vacant lot next door to its building for parking.

Bosche Building, Elmwood Park, Hudson St. are concerns

The Allentown Association is proposing that the land be sold to Howie Colon, a homeowner who lives on the other side of the vacant lot at 388 Hudson Street. He has been maintaining the lot for years and he plans to continue to use it as green space.

Volunteers collected over 160 signatures protesting the proposed sale by the city to the Friends of the Night People. A letter from the Allentown Association accompanied by a letter of support from Heart of the City Neighborhoods and the petition was sent to City Hall.

Based on that effort, the Common Council recommended that the city Office of Strategic Planning sell the lot to Howie Colon. The recommendation also includes not splitting the lot, as was proposed by the city Division of Real Estate.

At Elmwood Park, the Allentown Association has another battle: trying to get the green space designated as official parkland, but there is resistance. An effort is underway to have the green space itself designated a city landmark in the hopes to prevent unwanted changes. As one such example of inappropriate changes, the Buffalo School Board proposed erecting a gaudy, light-emitting-diode electronic sign in the midst of Elmwood Park on Elmwood Ave. between Edward and Virginia Sts. The Association vigorously opposed this sign as inappropriate in a historic district. Based on the Association's opposition, the Buffalo Preservation Board met with Buffalo School Board representatives who agreed to rescind the proposal. School officials are exploring other options for signage more appropriate for a historic district.

Representatives of the Preservation Board, the school board's adult education program and the Allentown Association agreed on Feb. 14 to recommend that Brad Wales be hired to design a custom artistic sign to meet the needs of adult education and fit in with Allentown. The school representatives also want to repair and maintain the windmill in Elmwood Park as symbol of renewable energy.

The First Presbyterian Church, an Allentown landmark on Symphony Circle, is continuing to study the needs of its building and explore funding opportunities. Most immediately, the church's tower has been stabilized, but it needs a substantial cash infusion to repair some problems.

The four-story, brick Bosche Building at 918-920 Main St., just south of Allen St., is Allentown's biggest immediate historic preservation threat. Built in 1891 by a carriage maker and designed by architect C. K. Porter and Son, the building is barely clinging to existence. The Main St. sidewalk has been closed off as a safety precaution. Inside, each of the three upper stories have collapsed into the first floor because of a large hole in the roof that has allowed infiltration of water and snow into the building. Two independent engineering studies, one paid for by the Allentown Association, warn of the imminent danger of collapse of the building. A third study, funded by the city to show the relationship of the building and the two that surround it, will be completed shortly. It is expected to show that demolition from the rear is preferable because it presents the opportunity to preserve the building's façade and poses less inconvenience and danger to public safety. It seems a foregone conclusion that most of the building must be demolished.

The Allentown Association is working to save the façade to preserve the historic streetscape. But to accomplish even this is a formidable task. Funds —$100,000 to $200,000 — must be raised, arrangements with an adjoining property owner to allow access from the rear must be made, and a re-use plan of the site must be put in place. Façade preservation has a life-span of less than 10 years. Eventually the façade must be backed by a building to stabilize it.

The Allentown Association has formally requested that Mayor Byron W. Brown name Association board member Matt Moscati to the Buffalo Preservation Board to fill the seat of Pete Carroll, who has completed three three-year terms on the board. The Association feels that it is important to have as many members of the board as possible who are familiar with Allentown's preservation needs.

The Association is also promoting outreach, collaboration and education. It recently published a color booklet, The Streets of Allentown, that describes all the streets in the Allentown historic district and includes a lot map of the district. The booklet has been widely distributed including distribution to the Buffalo Convention and Visitors Bureau. In the coming months, the booklet will be distributed to all members of the Allentown Association as well.

The Association is also working in collaboration with the Theodore Roosevelt Inaugural Site to sponsor a whole summer of historic exterior walking tours of Allentown and to create a color brochure to promote these tours. All major streets and historic places in Allentown will be highlighted.

In September, the Association will once again sponsor its highly-anticipated Secrets of Allentown interior tour of historic homes in September. It is hoped that these proactive educational opportunities will raise public awareness and understanding of Allentown's rich legacy of historic buildings and the complex issues of historic preservation.

3 gas-meter grants made, get your application in

By Andrew Eisenhardt

With spring right around the corner and thoughts turning to clean-up projects, flowering bulbs and spiffing up, it's time for a report on the Allentown Association's gas-meter beautification program.

Three projects were completed before winter set in, and a few more are in the works. The completed projects may be viewed at 448 and 591 Delaware Ave. and 88 Trinity Place.

Grants to minimize the intrusive appearance of gas meters in any historic preservation district in Buffalo, not just in Allentown, are being awarded by the Allentown Association with a $25,000 contribution from the National Fuel Gas Co. Foundation. The Allentown Association is managing the fund and reviewing applications for grants.

If a gas meter has been installed on your property, between the façade and the curb, you may apply for a maximum grant of $200 for a single-family house or $400 for a structure of two, three or four units with multiple gas meters. A matching grant is available for income-producing properties not owner-occupied, with an allocation of $50 per meter and a maximum of $500.

The Allentown Association website, www.allentown.org, has detailed technical guidelines for the grants. Property owners may use plants or other materials to mitigate the intrusiveness of the gas meters as long as the guidelines, set by National Fuel to ensure access to the meters, are followed. Application forms may be downloaded from the website or obtained by contacting the Association at 14 Allen St., Buffalo 14202, telephone (716) 881-1024. Call if you have questions.

The Allentown Association is partnering with Urban Roots Garden Center, 428 Rhode Island St. (716-362-8982, www.urbanroots.org) which will help applicants choose appropriate plants and install them at a flat rate to be included in the application.

Or, applicants can apply for a do-it-yourself reimbursable grant and do the work and submit receipts and a photograph of the completed project.

Get a start on planning your project now.

Visit www.allentown.org for the latest community news

The on-line affiliate of The Allentown Neighbor, www.allentown.org, has been expanded and provided with frequent updating to provide more timely news and information about Allentown.

The Neighbor, which has been published bimonthly since the year 2000, is now being published every three months, since regular updates may now be obtained by accessing www.allentown.org, the website of the Allentown Association.

The website was revised and expanded last summer by Mitch Bechtel, who manages the website on a volunteer basis. A Park St. resident, he designs custom websites, intranets and extranets, in business as Comand Solutions.

In addition to late-breaking news, the website contains:

- Complete contents of the latest issue of The Allentown Neighbor.
- Photos and information about every building in in Allentown, about 1,000 in all, listed by street.
- Business listings.
- History, geography, architecture of Allentown.
- Officers, directors and committees of the Allentown Association and how to contact the Association.
- An archive of Allentown Association publications and newsletters going back to 1965.

The website also has an "Allentown Essays" section which currently contains a commentary by Christopher Brown, Allentown Association president, about historic preservation.

Laurel A. Guess of Irving Place, retired librarian

Laurel A. Guess, an Irving Place resident for many years and retired head librarian at North Park Library, died February 4.

She was a member of Westminster Presbyterian Church and the College Club, where she participated in bridge and the Garden Committee. "She was a very caring and giving person," a close friend said. A funeral service was held in Forest Lawn Chapel with the Rev. Geri Lyons of First Presbyterian Church officiating. The Allentown community extends its condolences to her relatives and friends.

Last call for free trees for spring

The deadline for ordering free trees for the Re-Tree Western New York spring planting is March 14.

The Allentown Association encourages all residents, property owners and block clubs who would like trees to be planted between the curb and sidewalk, on city property, or anyone interested in volunteering to help in the planting, contact Wayne Parry at wnparry@adelphia.net or phone 883-0464. The planting dates are May 3 and 4.

Trees are available free because many were lost during and after the October 2006 storm.

Let's all help increase the tree canopy and further beautify our Allentown neighborhoods!

— Wayne Parry

Spring dinner is May 20 in Hamlin House

The Allentown Association's spring dinner will be held May 20, a Tuesday, at 6 p.m. in Hamlin House (Troop I American Legion Post Hall), 432 Franklin St. Tickets are $15 and reservations are necessary by calling the Allentown Association at 881-1024. Sarah Gilewicz, chairperson for the event, and her committee, are making plans for a speaker and the traditional Chinese auction.

The dinner is open to non-members and prospective members as well as members. Paid-up members will receive a mailed invitation and a copy of Streets of Allentown, a color booklet recently published by the Association.

2nd business mixer will be April 2 in Quaker Bonnet

Allentown business owners are invited to a second business mixer sponsored by the Allentown Association scheduled for April 2 at 7 p.m. in the Quaker Bonnet Eatery, 175 Allen St.

The mixer is being arranged by the Association's Business Relations Committee and is to include a brief talk on preservation, followed by refreshments and a candid of views and concerns of members of the Allentown business community and leaders of the Allentown Association.

More than 20 businesses were represented at the highly successful initial mixer Sept. 10 in the Quaker Bonnet. The Association hopes it will be repeated every six months.

Bike shop coming to Allen St.

Rick Cycle Shop plans to move in April from 743 Main St. to 55 Allen St., the space vacated by Neo last year.

Tom Azzarella is owner of the 110-year-old business.

"We have been anxious about this empty store front. Neo was a quality business and a good presence in the neighborhood," said Allentown Association Vice President Lura Bechtel. "The bike shop should be a welcome addition, adding to the sense of community we all enjoy here in Allentown."

Here's how and where to get in shape

By Matthew Ryan

Winters in Buffalo are made for hibernating. The cold blustery weather and early nightfall begs us to head to the couch and order pizza. Fight this urge. Challenge yourself to stay active. Keep in mind that after each winter comes spring and this should be the year you actually get yourself in shape for the spring.

Here in Allentown we have several top notch fitness establishments just outside your front door. To help in finding one that appeals to you, here is my take on several:

— Allentown Athletix, 538 Delaware Ave. Looking for a gym: this is a gym with weights, treadmills and machines that will get the job done.

Plus: racquetball, the sport that will give you a sense of purpose while you run in circles. Grab a friend and set a day each week to hit the courts. Trust me, it beats a 5 mile run to nowhere on a treadmill. As an added benefit racquetball increases hand-eye coordination which will come in handy at the summer barbeque when you go for that coveted triple burger flip or simply try to catch a beer tossed your way.

— KC's Fitness, 1 Symphony Circle at First Presbyterian Church. All the equipment you'll need, plus some motivation and personal attention. This place provides a positive atmosphere encouraging you to achieve your fitness goals.

Plus: group boxing/martial arts based training classes. Get in line and kick your way to fitness... hope I didn't steal that from a late night infomercial.

— Chad Jakobowski personal trainer, 260 Allen St. Truly one on one training to meet your fitness goals. You pay by the hour to come to Chad's gym for individual sessions made up of everything from stretching to weight training, striking techniques designed for great cardio to actual sparring – bring your own partner for that.

Plus: individual time and attention. Sessions are private, the gym along with trainer's focus is all yours. He will help you put together a program, then work with you each time you schedule. This could be ideal for a beginner who wants the individual assistance and privacy that most gyms lack or the avid gym buff who just wants to change up the routine with the boxing/strike training.

— The Pilates Loft, 166 Allen St. Day and evening classes available for individuals and groups. Offers both mat and equipment training.

Plus: you can't help but get toned from Pilates. Get in there and you will find that six pack you lost back in college. Not to mention increased flexibility and reduced stress.

Plus: Catholic Health Club, 506 Delaware Ave. Facilities, swimming pool, racquetball/handball, parking. This club has it all, except women. This club is men only.

Plus: I can't help but smirk trying to figure out any plus without focusing the lack of women, Here is a plus, you won't have to suck in that gut to impress any ladies. Despite the name, you do not have to kneel to the pope for a membership. Non-Catholics such as myself are welcome. As long as they don't carry that second X chromosome. (Sorry, I just can't help myself.)

Rainbow K school will move, expand

Rainbow K, an early childhood school enrolling pre-kindergarten through second grade, will move this summer to 388 Franklin St., a former office building near Virginia St.

The school, operated by the Missionary Sisters of Our Lady of Mercy, is celebrating its 25th anniversary at 388 Franklin St., at Edward St., which will be retained as the sisters' residence, Sister Victoria, the director, said. The school will increase its enrollment slightly to 45. The school is staffed by three sisters and one lay teacher. The new building has been purchased for $260,000 and renovations will cost $250,000.

East End Salon to move and expand

Patrick Monfort is moving his East End Salon to 47 Allen St. at the end of March to double his space to 1,200 square feet and add new retail lines.

The hairdressing salon opened at 95 Allen St. in 2006. The owner explains the move: "I have been testing the market by having locally handmade organic soaps, soy candles, and balms, as well as a few gifts and other items. I will be selling the soaps and bath salt in bulk by weight. I am also expanding the line of candles and balms. I will be carrying a line of organic cotton towels and bath accessories. I am also searching out small pottery. I want it all shopper-friendly as well as affordable.

"I have been so fortunate being able to be in Allentown. The neighborhood is so supportive."

A letter to The Neighbor on Park St. parking

I was pleased to read in the Newsletter that the day and hour for moving cars to the opposite side of the street has been changed for Park St. However, a petition with signatures of residents should never have been necessary.

Councilman Marc Coppola sponsored a resolution to change the parking restrictions which was adopted by the Common Council in November 2000. At the time I was parking my car on Park St. and began to park according to the new law. I was given a parking ticket that I protested. At the hearing I was told I had to park according to the signs, and (by implication) disobey the law! I was shown a list of streets in which the signs had been changed. Every street was within the district of Marc Coppola. I wrote a letter to the Department of Public Works with copies to Councilmen Marc Coppola and Barbara Miller Williams which resulted in nothing. I called Public Works on at least two occasions and was given various excuses.

Over seven years is far too long for the city to comply with the new ordinance. It seems to me that it would be better for the Allentown Association to unite with other neighborhood association in demanding that the city begin to change the signs and continue until the job is done. This would be preferable to begging for the new signs, street by street.

It is also offering more extensive classes, for which fees are charged, on home buying for new or prospective homeowners. See the Homeownership Center listing in the Calendar on Page 6.

Michael Petrillo, a former Allentown Association director, has donated $500 for a new grill for the Association's hot dog stand. The old grill burned out during the 2007 Allentown Art Festival.

Repairs will be made the at Karpeles Manuscript Library Museum, 220 North St. at Elmwood Ave., where bricks fell off the Elmwood Ave. elevation during heavy winds on Feb. 18, temporarily closing the sidewalk and on-street parking.

The St. Louis Church bell has been renovated and volunteers have devoted over 500 hours to restoring the church's wooden floors, scrubbing, staining and sealing them.
